New York Fashions

On every side one sees the most fascinating frocks of taffeta silk, irresistibly attractive for all varieties of wear, and that find favor with women of any age or tastes. Nothing is at once more practical and stylish than a dress of black taffeta, and it all depends on the lines and trimming whether this suits the girl or her grandmother. The shops are showing ready-to-wear skirts of this material in excellent quality, made after a number of smart models that are an invaluable addition to almost anyone's wardrobe, and that will solve the problem of the dress that goes anywhere and packs in small compass for travelling purposes, or week-end visits.

Victorian Coatees.

Colored taffetas make almost as practical and very pretty frocks, especially in the combinations of plain and brocaded or embroidered goods. Some of the most fetching models in the fancy silks with white or light tinted grounds, are made with diminutive Victorian coatees of black taffeta, a rose tucked into its folds and pretty lace used for the tucker and sometimes for the sleeves as well. A dress of blue taffeta with a flower in black embroidery spotted at quite wide intervals, had a jumper waist of black satin with strappings in military fashion down the front, of the blue silk. The same blue showed in the lining of the up-standing half collar and cuffs. A hem of black satin turned up on the right side finished the bottom of the skirt.

Hem Contrasts and Trimmings.

One notices a lot of trimming effects produced by contrasting hems. Frocks of pretty figured cotton and silk mixtures have up-turned hems of black taffeta finished with the bound scallops that are an insistent note in present styles. Gingham in stylish plaids have similar bands in the prevailing color at the foot of the skirt, and one sees many costumes that are half voile, half silk, which are novel and smart.

Up-To-Date Lines.

As the season progresses the complete change in the modish silhouette becomes more strikingly evident. Every tendency toward floppy slouchiness has disappeared and only when an erect, military poise is secured, does the new spring suit set as its designer intended. A careful study of points shown in the new models of Warner's rust proof corsets, just launched, will repay anyone who wants to secure the best effect for the coming seasons. Without any sacrifice of comfort or wear, these models bring every type of figure into line with present requirements.

Silent Colors.

Quiet tones prevail for street costumes, and more models are seen in single matching tones than for a long time back. Silent colors, someone has dubbed them, in distinction from the screaming hues that have been with us during the Oriental craze. Sand tones, soft grays, and grayish greens with the "Soldat bleu" just over from Paris. This latter is about the shade familiar in West Point uniform. Browns in all the quieter shades are well endorsed and with the long list of blues and the always popular black and black-and-white mixtures. The woman of refined taste rejoices at the opportunities the present color card offers.

A Fifth Avenue Hat.

A hat that is striking in its plainness is seen at intervals on the girlish contingent on Fifth avenue these days. It is usually of black fine straw and exactly reproduces the shape seen in pictures of the early Puritans. This has a band of ribbon about its crown with a buckle of pearl, usually, directly at the front.

Whooping Cough.

Well—everyone knows the effect of pine forests on coughs. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is a remedy which brings quick relief for whooping cough, loosens the mucous, soothes the lining of the throat and lungs, and makes the coughing spells less severe. A family with growing children should not be without it. Keep it handy for all coughs and colds. 25c at your druggist.

IMPORTANT WORK BEING HELD UP

Amendments Pending in the Legislature Put a Stop to Proposed Flood Prevention Work.

PEOPLE WANT ACTION

Thousands of Letters and Telegrams Sent to the Governor Pleading for Relief—People Throughout the Entire State are Demanding that Legislature Keep "Hands Off" the Vonderheide Flood Prevention Law.

Columbus—Special—Tens of thousands of letters, telegrams and petitions have been sent to the governor and members of the general assembly during the past few days, demanding and pleading that the legislature do nothing that will hamper the people of the flood stricken valleys of the state in working out their salvation. From all sections, individuals, societies, churches, chambers of commerce and others are adding their pleas to the mass. The people of Ohio are aroused as never before and any move to deprive the citizens of the flood districts of the privilege of working out their flood troubles in their own way will be met by a storm of disapproval never before equaled in this state.

The Situation. The situation presented is a peculiar one. Immediately following the flood of March and April, 1913, a number of men from the flooded sections met and decided that Ohio must have a flood law that would cover all sections of the state in any emergency. The result was that during the last session of the general assembly, the Vonderheide flood prevention law was written into statutes of Ohio. It has been recognized as the strongest law of this kind ever enacted by any state, and many other states throughout the union are considering it as it applies to their own situations. There is no doubt that it will be placed on the statute books of a number of states that now have inefficient flood laws.

This law is doubly strong in that it does not represent any political opinion; it is a non-partisan law in the strictest sense of the word. From the first there has been opposition, the origin of which we will leave for a future discussion. It is enough to say that this opposition has been of a political nature, and that it has thus far succeeded in holding up a needed work for a matter of two years.

The Vonderheide flood prevention law has been upheld by the courts of the state including the supreme court. It has been proven in every instance that the law is just and equitable in every detail and now, after the courts have made these decisions, the Governor senate amendment and the Quinlan house amendment are introduced as another factor in the game of delay.

This would not be serious if it were not for the fact that it seems a huron task to get these amendments before the members of the general assembly for final action of one kind or another.

The supporters of the Vonderheide flood prevention law are not asking an unusual thing when they make the request that these amendments be brought to the floor on their merits. What is This Law?

The reader may ask this question, wondering at the real cause of the controversy.

The Vonderheide flood prevention law provides a means for securing flood protection to those communal.
